FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Call for artists: Open Studios STL 2018, October 6–7, 2018

Open Studios STL 2017. Studio of Lindsey Stouffer.

June 5, 2018 (St. Louis, MO) – The Contemporary Art Museum St. Louis (CAM) announces the call for artists for Open Studios STL. In this, Open Studios STL's thirteenth year, CAM again partners with artists, galleries, alternative spaces, arts organizations, and universities in St. Louis City and County to make their studios accessible to the public for one weekend—October 6–7, 2018—promoting dialogue between artists and audiences within the artists' working environment.

To be eligible for participation, artists must maintain working studios or spaces in St. Louis City or St. Louis County. Artists actively working in galleries, co-working spaces, university campuses, residency programs, and other alternative spaces are eligible to participate. In all cases, it is recommended that artists highlight works in progress.

Locations east of Grand Boulevard will be open to the public on Saturday, October 6, 10:00 am–5:00 pm; locations west of Grand Boulevard will be open to the public on Sunday, October 7, 10:00 am–5:00 pm.

- There is no fee to register and participate.
- Interested artists may visit camstl.org/openstudios for submission guidelines and further information. Submissions will not be accepted if guidelines are not followed.
- Registration is open until Sunday, July 22, 2018, 11:59 pm. All artists who submit fully completed applications by this date will be listed on the Open Studios STL website (openstudios-stl.org) and printed map.
