New Art in the Neighborhood is CAM's flagship youth program, providing a nationally acclaimed, immersive studio art experience for local teenagers since 1995. In the current exhibition, Sequence, the artists explore animation and other forms of sequential art—the use of more than a single image to allude to or tell a story. The students met with Sarah Paulsen, 2018 Great Rivers Biennial Award-winner, and analyzed Guan Xiao and Oliver Laric videos at the museum. Starting from the young artists' familiarity with film, cartoons, and anime, narrative forms were explored, whether autobiographical or fictional. Each week the classroom transformed into a small-scale animation studio, with the students creating the series of collaborative works on view in the Education Galleries.
