FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

CAM Fall/Winter exhibitions include Great Rivers Biennial 2020 featuring new work by three award-winning artists in St. Louis

June 10, 2020 (St. Louis, MO) - The Contemporary Art Museum St. Louis (CAM) presents the ninth Great Rivers Biennial (GRB) featuring new works by St. Louis artists Kahlil Robert Irving, Tim Portlock, and Rachel Youn. Originally planned for CAM's summer season, the GRB exhibition will be on view September 11, 2020 through February 21, 2021. The Great Rivers Biennial Arts Awards Program, a collaborative initiative between CAM and the Gateway Foundation, recognizes talented emerging and mid-career artists working in the greater St. Louis metropolitan area, providing each award recipient with a $20,000 honorarium and a major exhibition at CAM. Three distinguished jurors selected the 2020 winners from among more than eighty submissions: José Carlos Diaz, Chief Curator at The Andy Warhol Museum and a 2018 fellow at the Center for Curatorial Leadership; Christopher Y. Lew, the Nancy and Fred Poses Curator at the Whitney Museum of American Art and co-curator of the 2017 Whitney Biennial; and Amanda Ross-Ho, multi-disciplinary artist and an associate professor at the University of California, Irvine. CAM Assistant Curator Misa Jeffereis organizes the 2020 Great Rivers Biennial.

Great Rivers Biennial 2020 Projects

Kahlil Robert Irving addresses cultural rules set by colonialism and white supremacy in his installation At Dusk, challenging those constructs through form, material, and performance. The artist conflates history and the contemporary moment through a gathering of multiple images and forms. Drawn from diverse sources with varied, complicated histories, the images and materials present issues that may go overlooked or passed by at the speed through which we engage with technology and social media. Within the space of At Dusk, Irving offers a recontextualization of images and materials, derived from his own social media and physical explorations, his personal biography, and the social context of Black life in the Midwest and more broadly within the U.S.

Tim Portlock's images are based on construction and demolition sites in various American cities. He applies compositional conventions derived from 19th-century American landscape painting for his large-scale prints. These specific techniques were used to construct realistic landscapes that embodied notions of American identity—a feral, bountiful land to be tamed by rugged, virtuous people. Through this imagery, Portlock explores ideas of optimism, displacement, and social visibility, with a particular interest in drawing a contrast between that which is being constructed and that which is being replaced. The artist asks: What kind of community is imagined through the form and function of new buildings as they supplant the constructions of the past?

Museumgoers encounter a feverish atmosphere that vacillates between a lively dance party and a booming evangelical church service in a sculpture installation by Rachel Youn. The artist transforms materials found on Craigslist and Facebook Marketplace—electric massagers, artificial plants, speaker cabinets—into kinetic sculptures that dance with joy and thrash in agony. Youn seeks to reconcile opposing worlds through these swinging, shaking, flailing forms. Raised in a conservative Christian household, they felt at odds within the open prayer and song of church, and alienated within safe spaces made for queer dance parties. Youn's figures, devoid of judgment, move freely and ecstatically to an all-inclusive soundtrack.

GATEWAY FOUNDATION

The exhibition is made possible by the Gateway Foundation.

The Great Rivers Biennial 2020 is organized for the Contemporary Art Museum St. Louis by Misa Jeffereis, Assistant Curator.

Kahlil Robert Irving (b. 1992, San Diego, CA) completed his first institutional solo exhibition, Street Matter – Decay & Forever / Golden Age at Wesleyan University, Connecticut in 2018. His work has been part of exhibitions at Matthew Marks Gallery, Los Angeles; Thomas Erben Gallery, New York; and i8 Gallery, Reykjavik, Iceland. Irving's work is in the collections of JP Morgan Chase Art Collection, New York; Nerman Museum of Contemporary Art, Overland Park, KS; Carnegie Museum of Art, Pittsburgh; RISD Museum, Providence; and the Whitney Museum of American Art, New York, among others. His work is included in the current exhibition Making Knowing: Craft in Art, 1950–2019 at the Whitney Museum, through 2021. Irving received his MFA from the Sam Fox School of Design & Visual Arts at Washington University in St. Louis in 2017, and a BFA from the Kansas City Art Institute in 2015.

Tim Portlock (b. 1969, Chicago) is an associate professor in the Sam Fox School of Design & Visual Arts at Washington University in St. Louis. A 2019 Regional Arts Commission Fellow and a 2011 recipient of a Pew Fellowship in the Arts, his exhibitions include SPRING/BREAK Art Show, PULSE, New York; Ruffneck Constructivist, curated by Kara Walker at the Institute of Contemporary Art, Philadelphia; Broadstone Studios in Dublin as part of Photo Ireland; the Tate Modern as a member of the artist collective Vox Populi; and This is Not a Gateway, a group exhibition of outdoor video projections in London. Portlock exhibited at the 404 Festival in Argentina and Italy, the ISEA electronic arts festival in Japan, and Ars Electronica, Austria. Portlock was among sixty-one artists selected for the State of
