August 16, 2022 (St. Louis, MO) - The Contemporary Art Museum St. Louis (CAM) presents a new exhibition by the data journalist, illustrator, and writer Mona Chalabi. In her new work on CAM's Project Wall, the artist visualizes the harsh results of loss of habitat, poaching, and global warming on endangered species. Her work tackles alarming statistics by finding truth in numbers and making that truth easier to digest through her compelling illustrations. Mona Chalabi: Squeeze will be on view at CAM September 9, 2022 through February 12, 2023.

Embracing her journalistic background, Mona informs her process with statistics gathered on politics, human rights, demographics, Covid infections, climate change, and many other topics. As the artist puts it, "My job is to take a story and to zoom out and provide context for readers. And the thing that excites me about data is the scale of it. Data gives you a new frame of understanding." For her exhibition at CAM, Mona focuses on endangered species of plants and animals, some of which are so close to extinction that every remaining member can fit on a New York subway car (if they squeeze).

About the Contemporary Art Museum St. Louis

The Contemporary Art Museum St. Louis creates meaningful engagement with the most relevant and innovative art being made today. Founded by civic and cultural leaders in 1980, the Museum transformed from a small gallery into an internationally recognized arts institution, now permanently housed in a flexible, open, and inviting building designed by renowned American architect Brad Cloepfil. CAM's distinct architecture reflects the organization's values and supports a dynamic range of exhibitions, public programs, educational initiatives, and community collaborations. The only museum in the region solely dedicated to contemporary art, CAM is one of the preeminent non-collecting institutions of its kind in the United States. We are a site for discovery, a welcoming space, free and open to all. For more information, visit camstl.org.
