August 19, 2024 (St. Louis, MO)—The Contemporary Art Museum St. Louis (CAM), in collaboration with The Mint Museum in Charlotte, North Carolina, is proud to present Shinichi Sawada: Agents of Clay, marking the artist's first solo museum exhibition in the United States. For more than two decades, Sawada—who is based in Japan's Shiga Prefecture—has produced a mesmerizing variety of alluring ceramic figures. Sawada's creatures are singular and inventive, existing somewhere between the natural world and the artist's imagination. The surfaces are significantly worked, with repeated linear patterns, horns, scales, teeth, bumps, protrusions, and often, multiple faces and eyes. These hybrid animals, insects, birds, and dragons have presence and personality far beyond their modest scale. Shinichi Sawada: Agents of Clay will be on view at CAM from September 6, 2024–February 9, 2025.

The sculptures are made in centuries-old Japanese tradition, fired in single-chamber anagama kilns, also known as cave kilns, fueled by wood fires that are stoked for days at a time. As elemental vapors circulate through the kiln and settle on the sculpture's surfaces, they create finishes that range from russet red, orange and umber, to ashy white and deep, velvety black.

This exhibition brings together a selection of works that Sawada made between 2004 and 2021. They have been produced with support from Nakayoshi Fukushima Welfare Association, which offers social and developmental support to a range of neurodivergent and disabled individuals. Sawada, who has nonspeaking autism, has been making ceramics since 2000, prolifically creating objects in series, and revisiting certain characters and forms again and again. Their infinite variances underscore Sawada's artistic breadth, originality, and creativity.

"It was a great pleasure and honor to work with Dr. Jen Sudul Edwards and The Mint Museum to bring this captivating exhibition to fruition and to select objects that give audiences a view into the breadth of Sawada's work," says Lisa Melandri, Executive Director of CAM. "The personality, impact, and extraordinary character of these sculptures is far greater than their size. Simply looking at these works, you can feel Sawada's creativity and imagination, and that's what makes them so universally appealing."

Shinichi Sawada: Agents of Clay was developed in collaboration with The Mint Museum in Charlotte, North Carolina, where it was on view from April 27–August 11, 2024. It will make its debut in the midwest here at CAM.

The exhibition is accompanied by a publication, Shinichi Sawada: Agents of Clay, featuring images of works in the exhibition, an introduction and acknowledgments by co-organizers Lisa Melandri and Jen Sudul Edwards, Ph.D., and a scholarly essay by independent curator, writer, and arts administrator of contemporary art and craft, Angelik Vizcarrondo-Laboy.

Shinichi Sawada: Agents of Clay is organized by Lisa Melandri, Executive Director, Contemporary Art Museum St. Louis, and Jen Sudul Edwards, Ph.D., Chief Curator and Curator of Contemporary Art at The Mint Museum.

This exhibition is generously supported in part by the National Endowment for the Arts, Alexis M. Cossé and Erik Karanik, and the Ferring Family Foundation. The exhibition publication has been generously supported in part by Jennifer Lauren Gallery and James Cohan Gallery.
